Peter and the Wolf

Peter lives near the woods in a small cottage with his grandfather. There has been lots of snowfall. The woods and the field near Peter's home are all covered with snow.

Grandfather asks Peter not to go outside because it was cold and also because a wild wolf lived in the woods. Grandfather was afraid the wolf might get him. Peter did not remember his grandfather's warning and he went out after a bird. The bird flew and sat on a tree while Peter was standing below it, watching it eat a worm.

All of a sudden, the wolf came out from behind the bushes, with his tongue hanging out of his mouth. Peter ran into his home and the wolf stayed there watching the bird. It wanted to eat that bird.

Peter and his grandfather were watching the wolf from inside their home. Peter's grandfather tied a knot in a huge rope and threw the rope from the window. The wolf's head got stuck in the rope. Now it could not run or move. Next, Peter's grandfather quickly called the officers from the zoo to come and take it away and place it there in a cage with other wolves.

Peter was very happy and so were all the kids in the neighborhood. Now they can all play in peace without being afraid of the wolf.
